OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Needlework Wrinkles.

The needlewoman who finds her drawn thread work refusing to lie flat (even after she has shrunk the linen before using) will find that if the thread she uses is put into boiling water and left until the water is cold there will be no further trouble. This precaution also applies to hemstitching.

Another needlework wrinkle worth passing on is that of washing the hands in a weak solution of alum if they are inclined to perspire. They will not soil or hinder the work.
